Cornell Among Peace Corps' Top Volunteer-Producing Colleges & Universities in 2014

NEW YORK, N.Y., Feb. 11, 2014 – The Peace Corps today released the 2014 rankings of the top volunteer-producing colleges and universities across the country. This year, Cornell University ranked No. 5 among medium schools, with 29 undergraduate alumni currently volunteering worldwide.

Cornell alumni are currently serving as volunteers in Benin, Cameroon, China, Ecuador, Ethiopia, Guatemala, Jamaica, Kenya, Kyrgyz Republic, Malawi, Moldova, Namibia, Paraguay, Peru, Senegal, Tanzania, Togo and Uganda. They work in areas including agriculture, education, environment, health and community economic development.

Cornell tied with the University of Vermont for the No. 5 spot. In 2013, Cornell ranked No. 4.

“The same passion that launched the Peace Corps more than 50 years ago fuels progress in developing countries today thanks to the leadership and creativity that college graduates bring to their Peace Corps service,” Peace Corps Acting Director Carrie Hessler-Radelet said. “The unique Peace Corps experience helps recent graduates cultivate highly sought-after skills that will launch their careers in today’s global economy.”

Since the first days of the Peace Corps, 1,622 Cornell alumni from have traveled abroad to serve as volunteers.

“At Cornell, I discovered my passion for international health and development,” said Allie Munson, a Cornell alumna who is currently serving as a Peace Corps volunteer in Guatemala, where she works to improve maternal and child health. “Peace Corps was the perfect opportunity to gain experience working abroad in these fields in a grassroots, dig-in-and-get-your-hands-dirty kind of way that fosters strong connections with local community members and a deep understanding and respect for a new culture.”

The Ithaca, N.Y. region topped the 2013 list of metropolitan areas with the highest per capita number of Peace Corps volunteers. In 2013, 12 currently-serving Peace Corps volunteers called Tompkins County home, making it the top Peace Corps volunteer-producing metro in the nation on a per-capita basis.

Service in the Peace Corps is a life-defining, hands-on leadership experience that offers volunteers the opportunity to travel to the farthest corners of the world and make a lasting difference in the lives of others. Peace Corps volunteers live and work at the community level and promote a better understanding between Americans and the people they serve, while at the same time becoming global citizens.

When they return home, volunteers bring knowledge and experiences that give them a competitive edge for 21st century jobs and advanced educational opportunities. They give back to their own communities and enrich the lives of those around them, helping to strengthen international ties and increase our country's global competitiveness.

The Peace Corps has eight regional recruitment offices across the United States that work closely with prospective volunteers to ensure that all Americans who want to serve have the opportunity to do so. The Northeast regional recruitment office serves Cornell University, and Peace Corps recruiters are based throughout the region. About the Peace Corps: As the preeminent international service organization of the United States, the Peace Corps sends Americans abroad to tackle the most pressing needs of people around the world. Peace Corps volunteers work at the grassroots level with local governments, schools, communities, small businesses and entrepreneurs to develop sustainable solutions that address challenges in education, health, economic development, agriculture, environment and youth development. When they return home, volunteers bring their knowledge and experiences – and a global outlook – back to the United States that enriches the lives of those around them. President John F. Kennedy established the Peace Corps in 1961 to foster a better understanding among Americans and people of other countries. Since then, more than 215,000 Americans of all ages have served in 139 countries worldwide. Visit www.peacecorps.gov to learn more.
