FINAL REPORT

Biennial Report on Volunteer Allegations of Misconduct or Mismanagement by Peace Corps Staff

November 2018

SUMMARY

On November 21, 2011, the President signed into law the Kate Puzey Peace Corps Volunteer Protection Act of 2011¹ (Kate Puzey Act), which enhances Volunteer safety and security and the Peace Corps’ response to Volunteer victims of sexual assault. In accordance with section 2, § 8E(d)(1)(A) of the Peace Corps Act, as amended by the Kate Puzey Act, the Peace Corps Office of Inspector General (OIG) must provide a report compiling complaints and allegations we have received from Volunteers about staff misconduct, mismanagement, and breaches of Volunteer confidentiality, as well as what actions were taken to assure the safety of the Volunteers who made those reports.

This report identifies “reportable complaints and allegations” received by OIG between October 1, 2016, and September 30, 2018; whether such complaints or allegations involve breaches of Volunteer confidentiality; and actions taken by OIG subsequent to the complaints or allegations to assure the safety of Volunteers who made such reports. “Reportable complaints and allegations” are those made by Volunteers, trainees, applicants, and returned Peace Corps Volunteers (returned Volunteers), which relate to misconduct or mismanagement by Peace Corps staff.

During the 2 years covered by this report, OIG received approximately 827 complaints from all sources. Of those complaints, 277 (33 percent) originated from Volunteers and were about misconduct or mismanagement by Peace Corps staff (See Figures 1 and 2).² OIG initiated inquiries into the 277 complaints, 4 of which were converted into preliminary inquiries (PIs).³ During this 2016-2018 reporting period, 2 of the 277 allegations were converted into investigations, 1 of which is still under inquiry.

OIG reviews each complaint in a diligent and thorough manner in accordance with applicable laws, rules, and regulations. In some cases, PIs are opened, and the complaint is assigned to a special agent (SA). To determine if a complaint should be converted to a PI or an investigation, the Hotline operator elicits as much information from the complainant in order to collect as many facts as possible. The Hotline operator can do so through a preliminary interview of the complainant. Examples of screening techniques used at this stage include obtaining the particulars of the allegation to identify any witnesses, determining if there is a health or safety concern, and obtaining any evidentiary documentation, if possible. Depending on the information obtained about a complaint, the Assistant Inspector General for Investigation (AIG/I) determines the disposition of the complaint. In a majority of the cases during this reporting period, the initial work conducted by the Hotline operator was sufficient to justify the complaint not being converted to a PI or an investigation. Rather, the allegations were referred to OIG's units, to other offices within the agency, or to the regional or post staff who were better positioned to address the concerns.

² OIG previously categorized allegations described in the 2014 Biennial Report as “policy violations.” As policy violations tend to be a subset of misconduct or mismanagement, allegations regarding policy violations have been recategorized as mismanagement for the purposes of this report.

³ In OIG’s previous case management system that tracked all complaints, PIs, and investigations, the allegations were labeled as PIs. In OIG’s new tracking system, all allegations are labeled complaints before being converted to either a PI or an investigation. This reporting period includes allegations from both the previous case management system as well as the current case management system. For purposes of this report, the allegations that would have been considered PIs under the old system are considered complaints unless the complaint was assigned to a SA and there was a summary report written.

For some allegations, the complaint is converted into a PI and is assigned to a SA. PIs are of a limited duration and scope, the goal of which is to determine whether the opening of a full investigation is justified. Interviews, to include subject interviews, queries with other agencies, and the review of agency records, are investigative techniques that may be used in such inquiries. Upon completion of the PI, the AIG/I, with input from the SA, will make a determination about the merits of the complaint/allegation and the course of investigative action to be taken, such as referring it or opening a full investigation. During this reporting period, we had multiple complaints that were converted to PIs, but were ultimately not converted into investigations.

Allegations of mismanagement were the most common type of complaint received. During this reporting period, October 2016 to September 2018, allegations of mismanagement were a greater proportion of reportable allegations than during the reporting periods for each of the three previous issuances (2012, 2014, and 2016) of the Biennial Report on Volunteer Allegations of Misconduct or Mismanagement by Peace Corps Staff (Biennial Report). While there is no clear definition for either term, "mismanagement" allegations generally involve poor or uninformed performance on the part of an employee, whereas "misconduct" allegations generally involve behavior that violates a law, regulation, policy, or is otherwise unacceptable.

While OIG maintains an online reporting tool located on the OIG webpage of the Peace Corps website that allows complainants to make anonymous allegations, OIG also receives allegations or complaints through our dedicated email address, by phone, by mail, through direct outreach with Peace Corps Volunteers, and during OIG field work (See Figure 3). The majority of complaints (90 percent) were received through a dedicated OIG Hotline contact tool such as the online reporting tool, dedicated OIG email address, dedicated OIG phone line, or dedicated P.O. box. Another 10 percent of complaints were received through other email communications or phone calls made directly to an individual in OIG.⁴

OIG included in this report all allegations received that originated from Volunteers, trainees, returned Volunteers, and applicants, regardless of the individual who brought the complaint to the attention of OIG (See Figure 4). Many complaints were brought to the attention of OIG by Peace Corps staff; family of Volunteers; the general public; and other trainees, Volunteers, and returned Volunteers. However, for the purposes of this report, OIG only tracked the origin of the complaint: a trainee, Volunteer, returned Volunteer, or applicant. "Returned Volunteer" includes former Volunteers who successfully completed a full term of service, former Volunteers who were separated from service or received interrupted service, former trainees, and complaints provided to OIG by family members on behalf of a former Volunteer. "Volunteer" includes current Volunteers, and complaints from family members of Volunteers who submitted an allegation on behalf of the Volunteer. Notably, the percentage of complaints which originated from Volunteers about Peace Corps staff members increased from 62 percent of complaints in the 2016 Biennial Report to 73 percent in this report.

Overall, there has been a 965 percent increase in the number of reportable complaints during this reporting period as compared to the first reporting period in 2012,⁵ a 177 percent increase as compared to the 2014 Biennial Reporting period, and a 16 percent increase as compared to the 2016 Biennial Reporting period (See Figures 4 and 5).

⁵ The 2012 reporting period was limited to approximately 1 year of complaints. The 2014, 2016, and 2018 reporting periods covered 2 years each.

Mismanagement Allegations by Subtype

OIG further categorized allegations by subtype (See Figure 6). Mismanagement allegations covered a broad spectrum of complaints, the most prevalent of which include complaints about staff performance (80 complaints), housing/safety concerns (50 complaints), healthcare (40 complaints), and administrative separations from service (22 complaints). We note that complaints about staff performance and unfair treatment more than doubled when compared to the 2016 Biennial Report. Often, these complaints are initiated when a Volunteer reaches out to OIG seeking to dispute policies at post, or the application of those policies. For allegations that do not specify a breach of policy or misconduct, OIG will either seek the alleged’s consent to refer the matter to the appropriate Peace Corps office or refer the matter to the appropriate OIG unit for information. Sixteen complaints alleged the agency mismanaged its responses to sexual assaults; however, 20 complaints alleged misconduct or mismanagement by an agency employee in circumstances that arose because of sexual assaults.⁶

Figure 6. Categories of Mismanagement Reported for Biennial Report Periods 2012-2018. Note that for the 2014 Biennial Report, OIG listed ‘housing’ and ‘safety’ allegation subtypes as separate matters. Given the nature of the Volunteer complaints regarding housing and their relationship to Volunteer safety, they are listed in the 2016 and 2018 Biennial Reports together. Note that for the 2014 and 2016 Biennial Reports, OIG listed ‘other’ as a separate matter, which included complaints regarding ‘application process’. During the 2016-2018 reporting period, OIG created an ‘application process’ category and did not receive complaints outside of the designated categories in Figure 6. 2012 n=21, 2014 n=81, 2016 n=218, 2018 n=257. Source: OIG case management system.

⁶ Not all allegations involving a sexual assault were necessarily related to a mismanaged response to a sexual assault. For example, a Volunteer may have alleged that an employee might improperly disclose information related to a sexual assault in an incident unrelated to the agency response to the sexual assault itself.

Misconduct Allegations by Subtype

OIG further categorized misconduct allegations by subtype (See Figure 7). The misconduct allegations covered a broad spectrum of complaints, the most prevalent of which involved allegations of sexual assault/harassment (six complaints), discrimination (five complaints), and fraternization (four complaints).

Figure 7: Areas of Misconduct Reported for Biennial Report Periods 2012-2018. Prior allegations included Retaliation, Medical Care, and Ethics Violations, however there were no complaints in those categories for this reporting period and thus were not included. 2012 n=5, 2014 n=14, 2016 n= 20, 2018 n=20. Allegations by Region

OIG analyzed data from all reporting periods to examine trends in the geographic location of complaints. Absolute numbers of complaints have risen in each progressive reporting period, but not equally between administrative regions (Regions). In this reporting period complaints in the Africa Region increased by 221%, representing nearly half of all Africa Region’s complaints from all Biennial Reports (See Figure 8). In the 2016-2018 reporting period, Africa Region accounted for approximately half of all complaints, however Africa Region is also responsible for nearly half of all Volunteer Years Served. By calculating the number of complaints in terms of Volunteer Years Served, the upward trend in Africa Region complaints is less pronounced (See Figure 9).

BREACHES OF VOLUNTEER CONFIDENTIALITY

During the reporting period, OIG received 20 allegations from Volunteers regarding breaches of confidentiality. OIG provided serious consideration to each allegation. Depending on the nature of the complaint, OIG took a variety of actions to address the allegation. In some cases, OIG referred matters to post or Region staff. For example, seven cases were referred to Region or post staff during this reporting period. One case that was referred to Region staff involved a staff member who allegedly violated the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act (HIPAA). Other examples of cases referred to post or Region staff involved a staff member who shared information about a Volunteer's assault, and a staff member who shared restricted information with both staff and Volunteers. Some cases referred to post or Region staff also resulted in the accused staff member being counseled about laws and policies about protecting Volunteer confidentiality or the accused staff member receiving a letter of reprimand.

OIG also refers breaches of confidentiality to other offices within the agency, as well as to OIG's Evaluation and Audit Units. During this reporting period, the Office of Health Services (OHS) was referred an allegation involving a Volunteer's assigned nurse who allegedly violated HIPAA. The agency's breach notification team also received a referral from OIG for a case in which a returned Volunteer inadvertently received medical records of multiple Volunteers.

In some cases, OIG is unable to further inquire into alleged breaches of confidentiality. This Biennial Report includes two such cases. In one case the Volunteer refused to waive confidentiality in order to let appropriate staff know about the breach, and for another incident the Volunteer requested that OIG not further its inquiry into the complaint. As allegations involving breaches of confidentiality were highlighted in the Kate Puzey Act, such allegations are explicitly noted in the allegation descriptions below.

RESPONDING TO VOLUNTEER ALLEGATIONS

OIG is committed to reviewing all complaints, allegations, or concerns we receive; giving them serious consideration; and treating them with the utmost discretion. OIG will not disclose the identity of individuals reporting the information without their consent, unless the Inspector General determines such disclosure is unavoidable during the course of an investigation.

Actions Taken to Ensure Volunteer Safety

In responding to Volunteer allegations, OIG often coordinates with relevant agency offices that have programmatic responsibility for the particular issue alleged if OIG believes the office is in the best position to respond. Examples of offices or individuals with which OIG often coordinates responses to Volunteer allegations with includes the Office of Safety and Security (OSS); the Office of Civil Rights and Diversity (OCRD); OHS; country directors (CDs); and regional management for Africa Region Operations (AF); Europe, Mediterranean, and Asia Region Operations (EMA); and Inter-America and the Pacific Region Operations (IAP).

Additionally, when conducting investigative activity, OIG regularly assesses the safety of Volunteers who provide complaints or allegations.

OIG takes routine precautions to ensure the safety of Volunteer complainants, such as not disclosing the complainant's identity without consent and working with agency staff to ensure that Volunteers are not at risk due to filing a complaint or as a result of the circumstances related to the complaint. The agency has the programmatic responsibility of ensuring the safety and security of all Volunteers, though OIG may monitor the agency response to a particular Volunteer complaint if circumstances warrant follow-up. The agency also requires that all staff overseas be trained annually on handling Volunteer allegations and has policies and procedures⁷ for all agency employees on handling complaints and allegations made by Volunteers. Where additional action was taken by OIG, it is explicitly noted in the allegation descriptions in this report.

Of allegations received that are covered by this report, 251 allegations (91 percent) involved matters which did not necessitate additional action to ensure the safety of Volunteers. During the FY 2014-2016 reporting cycle, 98 percent of responsive allegations received did not require such additional action be taken. In these cases it was determined that action was either unnecessary or unfeasible because the Volunteers involved had already left the country, closed their service, remained anonymous, or the situation otherwise did not necessitate additional action. In cases where the situation did not necessitate additional action to assure the safety of the complainant, OIG referred the allegation and did not reveal the Volunteer's identity without the Volunteer's consent. Unless otherwise noted in the descriptions of the complaints, no action was necessary to protect the safety of the complaining Volunteer.

The OIG Investigation Unit examines whether the facts and circumstances of the complaints give rise to a criminal or administrative violation and, if appropriate, refers cases for criminal prosecution or to agency management for action. These referrals can result in cases remaining open for a longer period of time than other allegations. Investigations are conducted under the direction and guidance of the assistant inspector general for investigations and in accordance with the Inspector General Act of 1978, as amended.⁸

Consistent with its strategic plan, OIG has established an Outreach Committee to engage with staff and Volunteers on the role of OIG. The committee, with the support of the Peace Corps Office of Communications, has developed an awareness campaign to ensure that applicants, Volunteers, and Peace Corps staff are educated on the role of OIG and how to report allegations or other information to OIG, including reporting allegations confidentially or anonymously. Volunteers now receive information about OIG. A sample of these materials is included in Appendix A.

⁷ Peace Corps Manual Section 271 Confidentiality Protection and Confidentiality Protection Procedures.

⁸ 5 U.S.C. App 3 §6.

METHODOLOGY

The Investigation Unit tracks complaints as described in §8E(d)(1)(A) of the Peace Corps Act, as amended by the Kate Puzey Act. OIG determined the scope of this report would include allegations or complaints received between October 1, 2016 and September 30, 2018.⁹

For the purposes of this report, OIG considered only allegations or complaints originating from Volunteers, returned Volunteers, applicants, trainees, former trainees, invitees or those being relayed to OIG on behalf of Volunteers alleging Peace Corps staff committed misconduct, mismanagement, or policy violations. If the complaint or allegation originated with a Volunteer, but was submitted to OIG by another individual, the information has been included in this report. For the purposes of this report, the term “Peace Corps staff” includes employees, experts, consultants, host country nationals, and personal services contractors. Complaints by Volunteers against other Volunteers were not considered for this report. “Breach of confidentiality” refers to any alleged breaches by staff, regardless of whether they were substantiated.¹⁰

If OIG received multiple complaints about a single incident, each complaint is accounted for. However, OIG has noted where a single summary pertains to multiple complaints. Information for each allegation includes: the administrative region where the alleged misconduct occurred, its type and subtype, a summary, whether there were any breaches of Volunteer confidentiality, a description of actions taken (if appropriate) to assure the safety of Volunteers providing complaints or allegations, and the outcome/disposition of each matter summarized.

⁹ Section 2 of the Kate Puzey Act amended the Peace Corps Act to include Section 8E (found at 22 U.S.C. 2507(e)) to mandate that OIG “...submit to the Committee on Foreign Relations and the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate and the Committee on Foreign Affairs and the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives a report, not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of this section, and biennially through September 30, 2018, on reports received from volunteers relating to misconduct, management, or policy violations of Peace Corps staff, any breaches of the confidentiality of volunteers, and any actions taken to assure the safety of volunteers who provide such reports.”

¹⁰ Breaches might include the improper disclosure of: (1) information protected under federal law, regulations, or policy; (2) the identity of an individual reporting misconduct, mismanagement or policy violations; or (3) sensitive personal information disclosed in confidence to Peace Corps staff.

The Office of Inspector General provides independent oversight of agency programs and operations in support of goals set forth in the Peace Corps Act while making the best use of taxpayer dollars.

What We Do

OIG conducts audits, evaluations, and investigations domestically and overseas, providing management with recommendations to improve the effectiveness and efficiency of the agency, while also protecting the Peace Corps from anyone who would like to do it harm by defrauding or misusing its resources.

It is our job to look into allegations of misconduct and criminal wrongdoing involving Peace Corps staff, contractors, and Volunteers, and it is our mission to make sure that agency funds are spent appropriately.

What You Can Do

If at any point during your service or work with the Peace Corps you suspect fraud, waste, or abuse of government resources, you should report it to OIG.

Also, if at any point you believe something was mismanaged (for example, a bribe was taken, your safety is in jeopardy, or a sexual assault response was mishandled), you are urged to contact OIG. When you come to us with your concerns, you help OIG improve Peace Corps.

Telling OIG the agency mishandled your case or the case of another Volunteer will not convert a restricted sexual assault report to a standard report.

Protection from Retaliation

OIG evaluates all complaints and protects the identity of Volunteers who bring their concerns to our office. No one may retaliate against you because you choose to report information and you always have the option to report information anonymously through our Online Reporting Tool.

Help Protect Minors

Under the PROTECT Act, it is illegal for U.S. citizens to sexually abuse minors overseas. Sometimes people can be reluctant to take action if they suspect a friend or co-worker is abusing children; however, the impact of inaction can be devastating.

OIG requests your help in protecting host country national children from sexual predators. Help stop child sexual exploitation by reporting any U.S. citizen who may be involved in sexual activity or contact with anyone under the age of 18.

Contact Us

If you have questions, concerns, or anything to report, please contact OIG using any of these methods. OIG protects the identity of Volunteers who bring their concerns to our office and the online reporting tool is also anonymous.
