Early Termination of Peace Corps Volunteers: Introduction and Overview

The Peace Corps has long recognized the significance of early terminations (ETs). When the service of a Peace Corps Volunteer (“Volunteer”) is terminated early, it represents the loss of a talented American engaged in cultural exchange and grassroots development within his or her assigned community and country of service. It also can have an impact on the relationship the Peace Corps has with the host country, since the unexpected departure of a Volunteer can have a negative effect on the Volunteer’s project and, by proxy, on the goals and objectives established between Peace Corps and the host country. Moreover, it represents a lost investment for the Peace Corps, which devoted its limited resources to recruit and train the individual.

Peace Corps Manual Section 284 establishes the policies and procedures governing the circumstances under which a Volunteer’s service may end prior to the projected completion of service date. For the purposes of this report, the term “Volunteer” includes anyone who has entered on duty, i.e., both Trainees and Volunteers. Pursuant to Manual Section 284, an ET occurs when a Volunteer “cannot or should not remain in service until his or her projected completion of service (COS) date.” There are four types of early termination, each discussed separately in this Manual Section:

Resignation: A resignation is a decision made by a Volunteer who no longer wishes to continue in his/her Peace Corps service.¹

Medical Separation: If a Volunteer has or develops a medical condition that Peace Corps cannot medically accommodate or resolve within forty-five (45) days, the Volunteer will be medically separated. This decision is made by the Office of Medical Services (OMS) in consultation with the Peace Corps Medical Officer and, if needed, appropriate medical consultants.²

Administrative Separation³: Pursuant to the Peace Corps Act, 22 U.S.C. 2504(i), the service of a Volunteer may be terminated at any time at the pleasure of the President. The authority of the President to terminate service has been delegated to the Director of the Peace Corps. Accordingly, the Director, or anyone to whom the Director delegates such authority, may separate a Volunteer at any time purely at the discretion of the deciding official and as otherwise expressly provided herein.⁴

Interrupted Service: A Volunteer may be separated with interrupted service status if the Country Director determines that circumstances beyond the control of the Volunteer make it necessary for the Volunteer to leave his or her present assignment. Because the nature of circumstances leading to interrupted service are beyond the Volunteer's control, interrupted service should not be used in lieu of administrative separation.⁵

The Peace Corps' 2010 Comprehensive Agency Assessment noted that "[t]he Peace Corps is attentive to ET and resignation rates, has a method for tracking them, and works to lower them." Familiarity with early termination and resignation data helps inform agency decisions.

This report presents data on early terminations for fiscal year 2013. As required by the Kate Puzey Peace Corps Volunteer Protection Act of 2011, Public Law 112-57, the chart entitled Annual Early Termination and Resignation Rates (see page 3) provides the annual rate of early termination of Volunteers, plus data from the previous six fiscal years. In addition to the annual early termination rate (comprising all four categories of early termination) the chart breaks out the annual resignation rate. As resignations make up the majority of ETs (approximately 70% of the total ETs each year) and represent a voluntary decision to terminate Peace Corps service early, the inclusion of resignation information in this chart tells a more complete story of early termination trends over time. The report also includes annual early termination demographic information (see pages 4-8) for the five demographic characteristics for which the Peace Corps collects data.

The Peace Corps is once again pleased to note the downward trend in ET and resignation rates has continued in recent years, and the agency will continue to closely review and compare these rates.

Annual Early Termination and Resignation Rates

Calculation

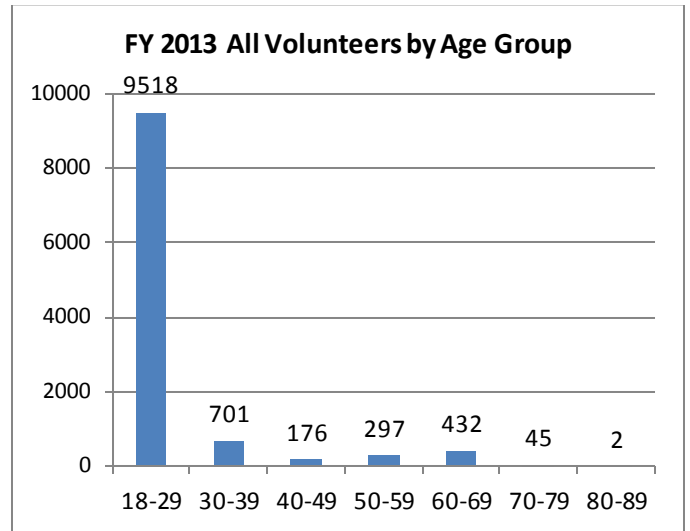

To develop the Annual ET rate, a dataset is created by identifying every Volunteer who served at any point during the fiscal year. The Annual ET Rate is then calculated as the number of Volunteers who separated from the Peace Corps during the fiscal year divided by the total number of Volunteers who served at any time during the fiscal year.
